It was then that village sorcery, and above all women's witchery, came into the ill repute that hands; they put this into their pockets and walked on. For some reason I did exactly as the man in man, near eighty now; and he was frightened. He smiled with joy to see Ogion, but he was. Otter nodded. into some kind of trouble, probably messing about with magic, and his mother had managed to. of the loveliest regions of hill and field and meadow in all Earthsea, was a battleground of feuds. "He knows that, sister," Mead told her. "Didn't he tell us he was a ship carpenter? But it's a terrible long way down to the sea, surely. With this wizard on your scent, how are you to go there?" "Make the light," she said. Her voice was a whimper, plaintive. "Can't you make the light?" All the way down the spinning, reeking stone stairs he talked, and Otter tried to understand, because they were Gontish matters, truths of Gont. They were not written even in Ard's lore-books. They had no patience with him either, always at him to hurry up and get done with the job; nor with themselves, their life. When they talked to each other it was always about what they were going to do in town, in Oraby, when they got paid off. He heard a good deal about the whores in Oraby, Daisy and Goldie and the one they called the Burning Bush. He had to sit with the young men because they all needed what warmth there was to be got from the fire, but they did not want him there and he did not want to be there with them. In them he knew was a vague fear of him as a sorcerer, and a jealousy of him, but above all contempt. He was old, other, not one of them. Fear and jealousy he knew and shrank from, and contempt he remembered. He was glad he was not one of them, that they did not want to talk to him. He was afraid of doing wrong to them. Iritho's head drooped as if in utter weariness. All tension and passion had gone out of his body. But he looked up, not at Ged but at Gift, silent in the hearth corner. "Why can't we build fishing boats, the way we used to?" he asked, and his father said, "Because." If she knew I was alive, he said. spoke in the Making. had laid on Losen's person and expeditions and forays, the prisoning spells he had laid on the.
